

The Osterville Village Library Update

September 2011

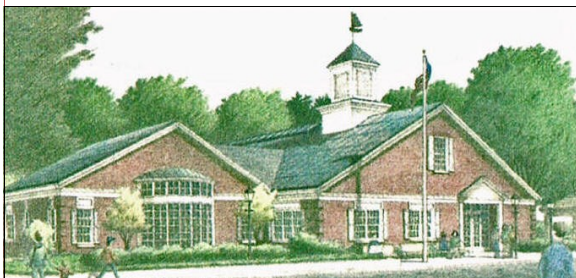

A Sketch Becomes Reality!

In 2004 the Trustees of the Osterville Village Library engaged the service of architect Charles T. ("Ted") Bellingrath and he began to draft plans for the new building. Sadly Mr. Bellingrath, passed away in November 2005, at which time the concept phase of the building design process had been completed.

After careful consideration, a successor architect was chosen, Jeremiah Ford, III, founder and principal of Ford3 Architects. Mr. Ford has undertaken the design development phase of the Library building project with great care, insight and enthusiasm.

Changes are part of the normal evolution of building design, when following a schematic design, the process moves into design development and construction documentation.

Jerry Ford picked up exactly where Ted's work left off, designing and delivering a building in the same spirit and style that will be both elegant and functional.

OVL will now be better able to accommodate its patrons by:

- ▶ Hosting over 300 programs a year
- ▶ Providing space for over 400 meetings a year
- ▶ Serving Young Adults with dedicated space
- ▶ Making WiFi available throughout the library
- ▶ Providing 100's of hours of computer time
